I'm looking for someone musical like myself... I actually live music... the only way you can tell I'm not happy is if there's not some kind of music coming out of me.

I must admit... with me, music a sickness.

I was born, screaming a perfect A/440... I'll pick up random objects and make music with them...

The most unique thing I've played was a Dachshund...

The poor thing was scared and let out a yelp, but I gave it a squeeze and elongated the note, pushing up on its soft palate to steady the tone with a little vibrato... then I SHOOK her a little to agitate her and allowed her to take a deep breath, and instead of a long, shriek of fear... the opening 12 notes of "Dixie" came out... and a little pee... then I patted her head and set her down while everyone stood amazed... including the Dachshund.

Her name was Josie... she wouldn't leave me alone after that... so all night long, I'd squeeze another one out of her... she wasn't very articulate as wind instruments go... Little Brown Jug, and Jingle Bells were about as complex as was possible... kind of like bagpipes that pee if you squeeze them too hard...

So... if you are afflicted with the same sickness, you owe it to yourself and your ultimate happiness to say hi ... or sing it... if that's possible on here... lol
